

It was a green light for fun this weekend as Oranjestad became “Green City”

For eighteen years early July had been the traditional time for Heineken Musicfest, but this year Heineken management decided to team with the Neme brothers of I Love Muzika, event producers, and stage a fun event for all ages and tastes. With the cooperation of the police and Aruban government the club section of Oranjestad, centered close to the new bus terminal became “Green City” this past Saturday night, and to judge by the numbers of revelers that attended, was a huge success.

Party people wearing the green wristband that gave access to all participating clubs wandered the green-lit streets, lining up to dance to their favorite style of music offered at various venues. Street dancers entertained those that preferred to stay outside and enjoy the evening breezes while sipping a Heineken. Whether one enjoyed the sound of Trance, Urban, Latin, or the Kompa beat, it was to be found. Some had their favorite nightspots, and VIP’s were welcomed into the newly opened Mr. Conga, just above the bus station, with Heineken DJ of the Year, DJ Yiemy turning the discs.

Great bands also performed, Kidare’s sported Lotus, and Mambo Jambo had Marisela center stage. It was great and green fun until dawn!
